Women of Mission in our lifetime

WOMEN played key parts in Biblical history. These include good and bad queens, righteous maids, praying mothers, powerful leaders, influential wives, generous givers, prostitutes, prophets, deaconesses, gracious hosts and faithful supporters and friends of Jesus.

In stories such as that of as Esther and Deborah, women take centre stage. Throughout the Bible's broad canvas, we can see how women with a mission had helped advance the kingdom of heaven in many ways. In the New Testament we see examples of how Jesus dealt with women. At the same time, many women followed Jesus and supported Him financially (Luke 8:1-3) and helped care for His needs (Mark 15:41).

Jesus specifically ministered to women on several occasions. When many of His disciples deserted Jesus at His death, women remained true and stayed with Him to the cross. Women were the first witnesses of His resurrection.

In the society in which Jesus lived and worked, women were largely kept out of public life. At Sabbath worship, they were mere onlookers, not participants. Like the Gentiles, women had a specially designated outer court at the synagogue, from which they could not stray. Significantly, it was located beneath the court for the men.

In public, men were restricted in how much they could talk to a woman, even their wives. Women were not allowed to study the Bible. In fact they were not even allowed to touch the Scriptures, lest they contaminated them.

Jesus took a different approach. Women were His beloved children, just as much as men. His death covered them just as much as any male.

Although rabbis of the time were not permitted to teach women, Jesus happily did. On one occasion, Mary, the sister of Lazarus, sat at His feet as a pupil (Luke 10:38-42).

Prejudice against women entered every aspect of life. Men were allowed to divorce women, even for the most trivial offenses, but women weren't allowed to divorce men, even for the most serious of offenses. Jesus had strong words to say about the current practice of divorce, which treated women as if they were objects owned by men (Matt 19:3-8).

In the space of two chapters in Luke, Jesus breaks the laws regarding contact with ceremonially unclean women. He touches a dead girl and restores her life (Luke 8:41, 42, 49-55); allows a haemorrhaging woman to touch Him (Luke 8:43-48); and lets a woman of ill repute wash His feet (Luke 7:37-39).

This to show to you and me how God feels about the way in which every individual should treat their fellow human being, whether male or female.

God Bless to all

Congregants at Swedish Free Church in Carolina stand against Gender-based Violence and edged victims of abuse to refrain from withdrawing case changes against the abusers.

The outreach programme for 16 days Gender-based violence was hosted by Carolina Police and Swedish Church and the community as a whole since the GBV is everyone's responsibility to fight it.

The leader of the Swedish Church pastor Mahlangu said that as a church they strongly condemn any form of violence because people should leave with peace and harmony as God instructed.

"We, therefore, plead with all those who are abusing and killing their partners to stop and get assistant when it needs be, and as the church, we say communities need to stand together and make sure that no one is abused on our watch," he said

He added that other churches need to pray for this demon of violence where innocent people have become victims of this violence.

"I believe that we can stand together and pray to God he will hear us and heal our nation. As for those victims needs to work with the police so that those perpetrators can be brought to book, and police must also make sure that they don't leave a stone unturned when it comes to

GBV" he said

Social Crime Officer Sergeant Thabang Mokwana at Carolina Police Station said topics that were addressed are Gender-Based Violence, Violence against the LGBTIQ Community, Effects of Criminal records, Effects of Drugs.

"If we can overcome the above problems in our community we can have a safe society, and police on themselves cannot fight this problem because they cannot be everywhere all the time. these crimes happen where people live and they can report it to the police and make sure that they assist police to arrest the perpetrators we will win this battle" he said

Mokwana further edged Victims of Gender-Based Violence from withdrawing cases especially against their abusive partners; To also treat the LGBTIQ community with respect and to stop abusing them Youth was warned against the use of drugs and Gangsterism especially at school

And that involving themselves in criminal activities will lead to arrest they have criminal records it will have a negative effect in their future.

Call to practise safe sex

Ofelia Mnisi

The South African Bureau of Standards (SABS) has encouraged South Africans to engage in safe sexual practices by using SABS certified condoms.

This plea comes as the world observes World Aids Day, on 1 December, which serves as a reminder to everyone that HIV/AIDS is still prevalent and precautions are necessary.

According to Statistics South Africa, the total number of people living with HIV in 2021 was approximately 8.2 million.

"At the SABS, we take all matters of public health and consumer safety very seriously. While the world is focussing on fighting COVID-19, we also want to remind South Africans that the HIV pandemic also requires sustained attention and that all citizens should continue to use condoms and practice safe sex," said SABS Lead Administrator Jodi Scholtz.

Scholtz said the SABS has a dedicated condom testing facility that ensures that all batches of condoms are tested in strict laboratory conditions, in accordance to stringent criteria and that consumers can rest assured that all SABS approved products are safe to use.

Should the SABS experience any sample failure, the entire batch of condoms will be disqualified to ensure that no defective products will enter the market.

The testing and certification of condoms, in South Africa, is mandatory. The SABS is the appointed certification body for the National Department of Health and National Treasury is contracted to conduct the testing and certification of all public health condoms.

The 'SABS Approved' mark appears on all government issued condoms, which are branded as MAX condoms. MAX condoms are available free to all South Africans at various distribution points. Additional safety precautions by the user include a visual inspection to ensure that individual packets are not leaking, torn or broken, been exposed to extreme heat or expired.

Condoms help in the prevention of unwanted pregnancies and sexually transmitted infections, including HIV.

The SABS also certifies and tests other brands of condoms according to the criteria contained in SANS/ISO 4074: requirements for natural rubber latex condoms. MAX condoms are tested to SANS/ISO 4074 as well as additional criteria set by the National Department of Health and at a higher testing frequency, thus ensuring a superior quality.

Ramovic wants Galaxy to be resolute in critical phases

“It is not easy to change the structure of the team from playing long balls to possession-based football. It takes time. We have to improve and we will learn a lot. We are unhappy that we didn't win but I must say, it is not easy to win when you are playing with a good team like Cape Town City. In the end, we are happy with the point,” he added.

Galaxy is 13th on the log with nine points after 12 games.

“We had a lot of opportunities during the game. We missed chances and we didn't play smart. We made complicated passes. We have to keep going and I'm sure we will win games again,” Ramovic elaborated. Since the arrival of Ramovic, the Rockets have shown character on so many occasions.

“This is the quality of the team that we have. They believe until the end. The game is not over until the referee blows his final whistle. This is the spirit and great character of the team. We have to make it easy for us. We have to play smarter. We changed the whole structure. After one-and-a-half months, we can see the progress. We have to keep going. We have to fight. We have to fight to be on top where TS Galaxy FC belongs.

Staff Reporter

TS Galaxy FC head coach Sead Ramovic has warned his troops to be more alert in critical phases of the game. The Rockets came back twice to earn a stalemate against Cape Town City this past weekend at the splendid Mbombela Stadium. The Citizens netted the opener as early as 56 seconds but the Rockets responded swiftly with an instant equalizer in the 3rd minute of the game.

“We didn't start the game well. We can't concede a goal after one minute. We have to be aware of that. We can't start the game like that but I'm happy that we came back. We had other chances. We could have been 2-1 up and I'm sure that
